

TRINITY YACHTS 'MINE GAMES'

Arguably the most prolific builder of luxury yachts over 150' today, US based Trinity Yachts have been able to feature no fewer than three of their yachts in this volume of 'Luxury Yachts Of The World'. While of a similar size, each of these three yachts is very different in style and appearance with each having its own unique characteristics, representing each owner's particular requirements.

From a yard which currently has no fewer than 24 major yacht projects in the design or construction stage until well into 2011, the 50m (164') 'Mine Games' is slightly larger, but shares the same high quality construction and attention to detail afforded to all of this prestigious yard's yachts.

Trinity's first move when working with the owner of 'Mine Games' was to bring aboard the respected interior designer Patrick Knowles. The owner's brief was for a yacht with a traditional classic style and with an interior boasting a variety of different materials from exquisite marble through to rich American cherry wood. Attention to detail and a yacht that would stand the test of time were of paramount importance.

Boarding the yacht from the stern, the large swim platform is immediately noticeable. Trinity have earned a good reputation for their 'trademark' swim platforms and the one on 'Mine Games' does not disappoint and is a highly functional and identifiable part of the yacht. At 4.2m in length it is large enough to store the yacht's large submersible, the 3m US Submarine's submersible 'Explorer 1000' which in itself is a work of art. Capable of diving to a depth exceeding 300m and with a predicted submerged endurance of 12 hours at 2 knots, the sub is fitted with high density halogen lights and its own manipulator arm. This allows the operator to collect material for study for the International Seakeepers organisation, which was founded to help protect and conserve the world's coastlines.

Patrick Knowles designed the main saloon of the yacht to be entered from the aft doors via a full width marble floored entrance lobby to facilitate guests entering the yacht when she is moored stern to in the Mediterranean. The entrance lobby leads through to a main saloon that would not look out of place in a Venetian palace. Containing a profusion of ornate furnishings, a large L-shaped sofa, a dining table for twelve guests and ornately painted ceilings well lit by golden up-lighters, the whole area while rich, warm and luxurious, can be bathed in natural light through the yacht's large side windows. Throughout the main saloon, a wide range of rich ornate fabrics, gold leaf and dark woods give the yacht its classic and traditional feel.

Further forward past a well-equipped galley, the owner's stateroom dominates the rest of the main deck. Facing forward, the master bed enjoys panoramic 180° views through large wrap-around windows. A full width master dressing area, owner's study and his and her bathrooms complete the luxuriously appointed master suite.

The owner is not the only one to enjoy the yacht's luxury, however. Four further staterooms are located on the lower deck, each furnished to the highest quality.

While the main deck has the feeling of a stately home, the bridge deck has a slightly less formal ambience, yet losing none of the yacht's grandeur and quality. Behind the modern and functional pilot house, the captain enjoys a large double en-suite cabin. Moving aft, panoramic views can be enjoyed from the large sky lounge where an array
